As some of you know, the Washington County Republican Party is doing things a bit different this Primary Election season. For the first time our PCPs will be voting to endorse candidates in the primaries.

For PCPs this is a great chance to learn more about the candidates you will be voting on in our upcoming Special Central Committee Meeting.

The Latest Triton poll shows Sam Carpenter edging out Knute Buehler and eight other candidates for first place in the Oregon gubernatorial race, as principled Republicans continue to rally around Sam. Additionally, Greg Wooldridge has fallen into a distant third place.

After a shift of over 13 points during March, Sams campaign has taken the lead. And in the poll, in a series of head-to-head match-ups against Kate Brown, Sam has the largest margin of victory in defeating her: over 5 points, showing conclusively that Sam can win the general election.

This dispels the three-decades-old myth that Republicans “have to” vote for a left-leaning Republican who doesn’t share, and won’t stand up for, good values and principles.
